LET'S GO FOR VROUVES

A tower defence game for the Commodore 64

The story

Armed with EU Directive 8647/2026, the corporate goliaths at Frankenstein & Moreau Co. are deploying bio-drones, hazard squads and heavy machinery to destroy vrouves – the wild, "copyrighted" mountain greens of Crete.

In the village of Zoniana the people have had enough. Deploy the defenders to protect the Kafenio, the church, the town hall and the rest of the village, and above all their precious sacks of bitter greens. Luckily the rebel corporate drone Psssst has defected, and fights alongside the heavily fortified villagers.

Loading the game

You need a Commodore 64 (PAL) with a 1541 disk drive (or an emulator) and the disk image `vrouves.d64`. Insert the disk and type:

RUN

The loading picture shows while the game loads. Leave the disk in the drive and not write protected: the high scores are read from it and saved on it, and the picture of the ending is loaded from it after the last stage.

On cassette

Insert `vrouves.tap`, type LOAD (or press SHIFT and RUN/STOP) and press PLAY; then RUN. The loading picture appears and the game loads under it, the border flickering. Leave the tape in the deck and do not rewind it: the picture of the ending comes next on the tape and is read when you win the last stage; after it the computer starts again. The cassette version keeps the high scores only for as long as the computer is on. If the border turns red, a part did not load: wind the tape back a little and press PLAY again.

The title screen

The title screen opens with a scene from the game and the main keys, then tells the story and shows the defenders, the invaders and the high scores.

Key	Action
SPACE / FIRE	Start the game
→ (or joystick right)	Next page
D	Difficulty: Medium, Hard, Hardest, Easy
L	Switch between English and Greek
M	Music on / off

The difficulty, shown under the title, sets how many lives you get for the whole game:

Difficulty	Lives
Easy	4
Medium	3
Hard	2
Hardest	none

The game screen

- The top bar shows the stage and messages ("build, then press N for the wave", "wave cleared"). When there is nothing to say it shows the title of the game, your score and the lives you have left.
- The playfield is the village. The invaders come along the road; the drones fly their own way, straight over walls and trees. Your defenders go on the grass beside them.
- The bottom bar shows the wave (for example `03/10`), your funds (vrouves, the money of the village), the HP of the building you defend, and the seconds until the next wave (`NEXT`), or `GO!` while a wave is on. Below it, the selected defender with its key, price and what it does. When the cursor is on one of your defenders, it shows how much selling it would give back.

Controls

Key	Action
Cursor keys (up and left with SHIFT) / Q A O P / joystick in port 2 or 1	Move the build cursor
1 – 7	Choose a defender (only those you have in this stage)
SPACE / RETURN / FIRE	Build the chosen defender on the cursor
S / DEL	Sell the defender under the cursor
N	Call the next wave now

Key	Action
H	Pause / continue
RUN/STOP	Quit to the title screen: the game pauses and asks, a second RUN/STOP quits, H plays on
L	Switch between English and Greek, at any time
M	Music on / off

The cursor blinks white and yellow when you can build there, and turns red when you cannot: the cell is taken, it is not grass, or you cannot afford the defender.

How to play

- Each stage has ten waves. Before the first one you have 45 seconds to build; between waves, 15. You start every stage with 120 vrouves and 100 HP.
- Every invader you stop pays you: 3 for a drone, 4 for a guard, 10 for a tank. Clearing a wave pays a bonus of 15 + 3 × the wave number.
- Feeling brave? Press N to call the next wave early: half of the seconds still left on the countdown are paid to you as a bonus.
- Selling a defender gives back about half its price.
- Every invader that reaches the building steals greens: a drone costs 4 HP, a guard 8, a tank 20. The sacks of vrouves disappear one by one as the HP drops. At 0 HP the stage is lost. With a life left, one life goes and you play the same stage again from the start, with your score as it was when the stage began. With none left, the game is over and you go back to the title screen.
- When many invaders crowd the same stretch of road, the C64 shows some of them as sprites and draws the rest into the picture, in two tones: nothing flickers.
- Survive all ten waves and you move on to the next stage. Win the last one, and the vrouves are safe: the whole village celebrates at the Bride's wedding, in front of the church. Press SPACE / FIRE to go back to the title screen.

The score

Your score runs through the whole game, from stage to stage, and shows in the top bar next to the lives you have left (`SCORE 01903 LIVES 3`) whenever the bar has no message to show:

	Points
Every invader you stop	the damage it would have done: 4 for a drone, 8 for a guard, 20 for a tank
Every defender you build	its damage: Cretan 6, Yiayia 14, Bride 4, Psssst 5, Cauldron 8, Baker 16, Lyra player 4 (taken away again if you sell it)
Calling a wave early with N	every second still left on the countdown

	Points
A stage won	every vrouve left in your funds

A lost stage gives no points: when you play it again with one of your lives, the score goes back to what it was when the stage began. The game ends when you win the last stage, when you lose a stage with no lives left, or when you quit with RUN/STOP. There is one table for all four difficulties, so the easier levels, with more lives, make a high score easier.

When the game ends with one of the eight best scores, enter your name: three letters, UP and DOWN to pick each one, FIRE (or RIGHT) for the next, LEFT to go back. The table is saved on the disk, so leave it in the drive and not write protected.

The defenders

Not everyone is ready from the start: the Kafenio is held by the Cretan and Psssst, every following stage up to the school brings one more defender to the village, and at the sheepfold, stage 8, the Lyra player joins in. A new defender is announced at the start of its stage. At the wedding, stage 10, the Bride is missing: she is at the altar, and 3 does not choose her.

	Key	Defender	Price	From stage	What it does
	1	Cretan	35	1	In midnight black, with a hunting rifle. Hits drones and walkers alike.
	4	Psssst	80	1	The defected drone. Its laser also melts armour. It hovers, so it can sit on walls, trees, graves and other blocked cells.
	2	Yiayia	50	2	Staff of chastisement and a pot of bitter leaves: slows down every walker near her and gives the closest a heavy bash. She cannot reach drones.
	3	Bride	70	3	Wedding white and a rapid pistol. One shot in four is a critical hit for triple damage.
	6	Baker	60	4	Hurls dakos (barley rusks) that splash onto everything around the target.
	5	Cauldron	110	5	A toxic cloud of "unlicensed lipids and ascorbic acids": hurts every walker around it, ignoring armour, and slows them. It cannot reach drones, and tanks dent it as they pass.
	7	Lyra player	90	8	Plays the Cretan lyra, and his tune hits every invader around him, walkers and drones alike. The drones, charmed, slow down. The damage is small and armour takes its share: he is for swarms of drones, not for tanks.

Neighbours

Some defenders work better side by side, and some get in each other's way. A defender right next to its partner – left, right, above or below, not diagonally – hits harder or softer:

Defender	next to	Damage
Bride	a Cretan	+50%
Yiayia	a Baker	+20%
Baker	a Cretan	–50%
Psssst	a Cretan	–20%
Lyra player	another Lyra player	–50%
Lyra player	a Yiayia	+50%

A Lyra player next to both a Yiayia and another Lyra player gets the –50%: two lyres playing different tunes spoil everything.

At most three defenders on the stage have a bonus at a time: the ones built first. A fourth fights at its own strength until one of the three is sold (penalties have no limit).

Before you build, the info line shows the bonus the defender would get on the cursor cell: green for a bonus, red for a penalty, grey for a bonus that three others already have.

The invaders

	Invader	What it does
	Bio-drone	Fast and fragile. Flies its own shortcut over walls and trees, so only the Cretan, Psssst, the Bride, the Baker and the Lyra player can reach it.
	F&M compliance guard	Armoured, with a weed-whacker and herbicide. Armour takes some of every hit, except the Cauldron's cloud; Psssst's laser melts it away.
	Weed destroyer	A treaded tank with lots of armour and health. It dents Cauldrons beside the road, putting them out of action for a few seconds, and costs 20 HP if it gets through.

The invaders get tougher with every wave. In some stages they arrive tougher still.

The stages

1. The Kafenio. The road winds down from the hills to the village café, its porch stacked with sacks of vrouves.

2. The village church. The greens are hidden in the church courtyard, by the priest and the candle stand. The road is shorter, and the waves a little bigger.

3. The town hall. On the plaza under the old plane tree, by the fountain and the mayor. The invaders here are tougher than usual.

4. The bakery. In the yard of the bakery by its wood-fired oven, among the woodpile and the racks of drying dakos. The road crosses the map in three close lanes.

5. The school. In the schoolyard with its basketball court, the flag and the teacher.

6. The village pitch. The greens wait on the touchline by the coach and the team bench, below stands full of villagers. The road runs around the pitch, and you can build on the grass of the pitch itself; the drones fly straight across it.

7. The cemetery church. At the little stone chapel among the graves and the cypresses. The road winds between the graves, where nothing can be built – except Psssst, who hovers.

8. The sheepfold on the mountain. High in the mountains, at the shepherd's fold where the vrouves grow. The sacks are in the yard of the mitato, the stone hut where the cheese is made. The road winds down in hairpins between rocks, dry-stone walls and sheep, where only Psssst can sit, and the waves bring many drones. The Lyra player joins in here.

9. The olive press. The old olive press, with its millstone in the yard and storage jars among the olive trees. The invaders come along two roads, one from each side, each taking half of them; the roads meet just below the yard.

10. The Bride's wedding. The last stand, in the courtyard of the village church, decked out for the wedding: the groom waits at the door and the guests sit at the long tables. The road runs between the tables, where only Psssst can sit. The Bride is at the altar, so here she does not fight. The last wave brings a column of tanks.

Tips

- Look for the bends: a defender next to two stretches of road shoots at everything twice.
- Cretans are cheap and hit everything, but a single drone wave can slip past a defence made of walkers-only defenders. Keep something that hits the air near the drones' route.
- Put the Yiayia where the road bends, so that the slowed walkers stay longer under fire.
- Put Brides beside Cretans, and keep Bakers and Psssst a step away from them.
- Against armoured guards and tanks, Psssst's laser and the Cauldron's cloud are worth their price. Keep Cauldrons a step away from the road, out of the tanks' way.
- Psssst can sit on walls, trees and graves: use the cells no one else can.
- Against swarms of drones, put the Lyra player where they fly past, with a Yiayia next to him, and keep Lyra players apart.
- At the olive press, a defence near the point where the roads meet hits both.
- Call waves early when your defence is comfortable: the bonus adds up.
